

In the Autumn of 2004 the Youth Justice Board issued an Invitation to Propose to the private sector operators delivering custodial services to the agency, for the investigation of the viability of providing purpose designed accommodation for the detention of juvenile mothers, potentially with their babies, in the secure estate.

Securicor Justice Services commissioned Nick Hyams with his Brennan Williams Lester team to work with their operations team to design a facility which accommodated the operational ethos we collectively developed on the winning solution originally constructed, now adapted to house and look after the welfare of up to eight pregnant girls or mothers with their children.
